The Courts Adjourn.
In the United States Court, the Hon. Judges Betts and Charles Benedict took their seats, when the Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson, in tones evincing the deepest

If the Court please, an event of startling solemnity to this nation suggests, I doubt not, to your Honors, the propriety that this Court should stand adjourned. I therefore move its adjournment.

The Hon. E. D. Smith seconded the motion, and the Court was ordered to stand adjourned.

All the Justices of this Court being on the Bench, Mr. D. D. FIELD said:
 May it please the Court—A great calamity, the magnitude of which we can yet hardly understand, has fallen upon this nation. The President of the United States, who had just been elected for a second term—

But yesterday we were all rejoicing in the prospect of returning peace; the flag of the country was floating from tower and roof, and window, all over the city and nearby. Into the future it is not permitted to shy of us to look; it seems to us dark and full of trouble. The clock of the world seems to have been suddenly set backward, and the shadow on the dial to have suddenly receded. Let us, however, in this horror which we feel at the great crime which has taken place, be calm. Let us act as a great and thoughtful people, trusting in God, who has created us so long.

I know, sir, that you and your associates and all the Bar will feel disinclined to enter upon any business on this day, except what is absolutely indispensable, and, therefore I rise, before any business whatever is transacted, to move that the Court do now adjourn.

Mr. JOHN GRAHAM, in eloquent terms, seconded the motion.

Chief Justice ROBERTSON, on behalf of the Court, spoke impressively on the awful and great calamity which had befallen the nation, and ordered the Court adjourned.

BROOKLYN ITEMS.

MOURNING IN BROOKLYN.—There is scarcely a house in Brooklyn but what is draped in the emblems of mourning. The City Hall, the Court-House, the engine house, and nearly every private residence, was hung with black and white. All the fire-bells were tolled on Saturday at noon, out of respect to the President. The following proclamation of the acting Mayor was issued:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, CITY HALL, BROOKLYN,
April 15, 1861—10 o'clock a. m.

The President of the United States has been murdered at the National Capital by an assassin. The history of our country affords no parallel to a crime under all circumstances so heinous and atrocious. It will be received by the people as a national calamity, and will weigh down the hearts of the people with grief and mourning.

To my fellow-citizens, I recommend a general closing of their places of business, the wearing of the usual badge of mourning, and such other manifestations of feeling as are proper on so solemn an occasion.

THROWS OVERBOARD.—A man named Gallagher, it is reported, was thrown overboard from one of the Union ferry-boats, on Saturday night, for expressing gratification at President Lincoln's death. It is understood that he was
